The world has changed radically lately, and the COVID-19 daily leaves its sad personal and financial footprints. Companies also have to think new in this changing world, so we do.

Therefore, take time to learn how to further professionalize your tenders, save your organization money and make tenders greener, while getting ready for new tenders.

For now, we continue with webinars. Join our course on “Referencing standards in public procurement” mentioned here.

Remember

Public procurement must in future be sustainable - see the new requirements from the European Commission on sustainable finance here:

Webinar: Sustainable building renovation

What exactly is sustainable building renovation? Is it all about reducing energy consumption and avoiding fossil fuels? How to reuse old building materials? What about the history of the building? How do you think about circular economy? Can it pay off? Is it hard?

If you are asking yourself just a few of the above questions or other similar questions when preparing procurement documents for sustainable building renovations, then a course could be a good and well-invested idea.

Webinar:

Referencing standards in public procurement

Are you among those who only use ¼ of the options in Article 42.3 on 2014/14/EU, technical specifications?

If you do not know to correct reference standards in procurement, then you are. Do you also study old procurement documents when referring to standards? That what 54% replied from 6 countries in a survey in 2019 ,when asked so, so you're not the only one.

You have then 1: Reduced your opportunities to reduce transaction costs and competition, 2: Increased the risk of complaints considerably, 3: Reduced your opportunities for more sustainable purchasing.
